- 1. Query from the church in Clarendon.
- 1. If one church has a difficulty against another church, belonging to the Tociation—What measures ought to be taken in order to obtain satisfaction?
- 2. If by attending to such rules as may be prescribed, satisfaction should not be obtained, in what sense does such a difficulty affect the churches of the union?

Answer. It is the duty of such aggrieved church to labor with the church that has erred; and if not satisfied, to request a mutual council; and if that is refused, then to call one themselves: and if the council shall think that a church, thus offending, ought not to be continued in sellowship, report ought to be made to the association, at their next session, by said council; that the churches in the union may not be imposed upon, by those who are corrupt: and such a church be considered no longer a member of the association.

- 2. Appointed brethren, Cornal, Beall, and Green, our messengers to the Shaftsbury association; and brother Baily to that of Warren; and brethren, Haynes, and Murry, to the Woodstock; and brother Webb to the Philadelphian association.
- 3. Appointed brother Haynes to write the circular letter to the churches, for next year—And brother Beall to prepare a letter to the fifter affociations.
  - 4. The affociation to meet at Pittford next

THE CIRCULAR LETTER, PREPARED BY BROTHER WEBB, IS NOW PRESENTED TO THE CHURCHES. Beloved in the LORD,

of addressing you from our annual convention, upon the important and precious subject of religion.

At our last annual meeting, we commenced the practice of sending a circulatory epille to the leveral churches: a practice which was attended to in the early ages of christianity; and which may be productive of salutary effects, if rightly improved. Our subject was that of practical piety: the necessity of which hath induced us to offer a few thoughts more on the same point.

With conscious satisfaction we view the encreasing spread of the gospel, and the growing empire of King Emanuel: the happy consequences of which are obvious to the eye of the beholder, by the willing numbers who take the Redeemer's visible yoke upon them. Yet with regret and sorrow we must say, that we fear too many profess to take Christ sor their Saviour, who do not take him for their King; but live in the violation of his precepts, and yet profess to lean upon the Lord, and trust in his promises. Hence the necessity of insisting upon works of righteousness as the happy evidence of a gracious state.

When no money is in circulation, counterestic are not imposed on the public and if

When no money is in circulation, counterfeits are not imposed on the public: and if there was no religion in the world, there would be no hypocrify. But religion prevails, and light abounds. Men in our day, know their duty better than they do it. Many have a speculative knowledge of the bible; but how sew have the spirit of the gospel! and thus deny the precious truths of the gospel, and live agreeable to their principles. What shall be clone then in this time of trouble, in shall be done then in this time of trouble, in which damnable doctrines, and erroneous principles are so industriously spread abroad?

Let him who is jealous for God step forth:

in shorr, let us all (both ministers and people) resorm from this very day; let us cry, solicitously cry to God for the life and power of religion: and let us be careful to perform every part and point of religious duty, with a fincer defire to promote God's glory and the good of fouls. Let us go without the camp, willingly bearing the reproach of our Divine Master; that the world may see that religion is not a mere chimera—a whimsical notion;—but a living powerful principle of love—supreme love to God: and by so doing our hearts will be encouraged and our hands the notion in the work of the Lord. threngthened in the work of the Lord.

But what is faith? Is it a bare affent to the truth of the gospel? Is it the adopting of ced, or orthodox of articles? Is it a belief that Christ died for me in particular, and therefore I shall be saved?

No.—True saving faith is not wrapped up in any of these things; it is that grace by which the soul is sensible of its undone condition—is enabled to lay hold of Christ as its life—to take him as its righteousness, and as its only way of access to, and acceptance with God. In short, faith disposes the soul to look from earth to heaven—from r ings visible to things invisible. It is the eye c. the soul, by which it is enabled to look unto Jesus, Heb. xii. 2. Hence the soul gets such transporting, assimulating views, as fills it with wonder, adoration, and love.

By faith the believing soul gives itself up to the disposal of God, both for time and eternity: waits the result of unerring wisdom, cheerfully acquiescing in the divine will. But fense or feeling, seeks present gratification, and knows not how to wait until eternity for the consummation of its desire s.—Faith is valiant; sense is a coward; faith leans upon the promise; sense despairs of its fulfilment. Faith, like an indigent petitioner, with empty hand and humble heart, receives Christ, and confides in his promises, and they become marrow and fatness to the soul. The just shall live by faith. Are we in darkness, and have little or no light, let us in this case, by faith trust in the name of the Lord, and stay ourselves upon our God; casting ourselves in the most unreserved manner, upon his watchful providence; being more folicitous about the performance of present duty than the possession of present happiness: by so doing we shall experience the accomplishment of that precious promise—They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength: they shall mount up with wings as eagles: they shall run and not be weary, they Shall walk and not faint. Isaiah xl. 31. Yes, brethren, as the aspiring eagle bursts through the yielding air, soars alost, and gazes on the meridian sun: so the heavenly minded foul bursts through every difficulty—soars aloft upon the pinions of faith, and obtains a glimple of the Redeemor's glory. May a confideration of these things, become a stimulous to our souls, that we may be strong in faith, giving glory to Godi.

Again-Suppose our graces seem to lan's guish, and our earthly comforts die, let us in this case hear the language of faith, triumphing over all adversity—Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labor of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation. Hab. iii. 17, 18. Let us endeavor to imitate the example of this holy man: and whilst tate the example of this holy man; and whilst others trust to their frames and feelings, let us learn to trust in the promises: but see that you do this in a way of duty; that you obey, as well as believe, every promise is an excitement to duty; let love be the heart, and faith the band, in the performance of duty; then will it be acceptable to God, and happifying to the foul. If we would grow in grace, we must not allow ourselves in any known sin; nor in the omission of any known duty; for it's the hand of the dilligent which maketh rich—in spiritual, as well as in temporal things. Indolence is opposed to the health of the soul as much as it is to the health of the body; for Slothfulness casteth into a deep sleep, and an idle soul shall suffer hunger. Prov. xix. 15.

Finally, if we would live godly ourselves, and by our examples excite others to the same, let us carefully avoid a light and trifling spirit, and flee from levity as from fire. The man that indulges himself in lightness and vanity, betrays his own soul, and robs it of that peace which is an attendant upon seriousness and meditation: and the minister who does so is like the drowsy watchman, who is able to take care of neither the city nor himfelf. Let us therefore endeavor, by prayer and meditation, to cultivate a folemn, serious and watchful frame of soul. These will arm you against sin, and be sweet preparatives to the performance of every duty. Thus the soul will become a retentive reservoir for all the graces of the holy spirit; which will enable you to manifest the truth of your profession by the circumspection of your conduct and holiness of your lives; by which the mouths of gainsayers will be stopped, and the name of God set on high.

And now, dear brethren, wishing that you may be built up in the unity, purity and truth of the gospel, we conclude our address in the words of the apostle—Now the God of peace, who brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus Christ, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfest in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ: to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

JOSEPH CORNAL, Moderator.

By order of the association, ISAAC WEBB, Clerk.
